Yankee Soldiers Study Booby Trap Contrivances

WASHINGTON. — American soldiers entering the field of combat will be trained to detect and deal effectively with enemy "booby" traps.

A "booby" trap is the name given to bomb contrivances used by the enemy to wound or kill careless or thoughtless opponents. Although not new, they could cause many casualties unless troops are trained to guard against them.

Every war produces such traps. To teach our soldiers to recognize these hidden dangers and to handle them, a training program has been under way for some time, it was revealed by Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general, army ground forces.

Training films and manuals are used to show soldiers the results of carelessness, and through actual experience with specially constructed traps, they are taught to be wary of their various forms.

The elementary trap usually consists of a small charge of explosive, either in slabs or in a cartridge, with an igniter worked by either the push or pull method.

House, Ready to Move In, Built in 44 Minutes

PORTLAND, ORE.—As a speed test on a 360 unit housing project near the Oregon Shipbuilding corporation plant, a normal six-man crew was augmented to 15 and, timing itself after the flooring was laid, did this:

In 4 minutes put up the prefabricated wall panels, 5 minutes later had the door frames, sills, and windows installed and screened; in another 5½ minutes had the framed gable ends in place (the electricians and plumbers were hard at it then); 5½ minutes later the porch and the final roof truss were in place; another 6 minutes later the porch sheathing was completed, and in 18 minutes the roof was covered with insulating paper.

The house, complete with kitchen, dinette, living room, bath, and two bedrooms was ready for occupancy —minus only a coat of paint and the sidewalk—in just 44 minutes.

Channel Islanders Plan Reoccupation of Homes

LONDON.—Since June, 1940, the Channel islands have been occupied by the Nazis and many residents have been living almost as exiles here. Now with a second front being debated, some of them are making plans already for returning home. The following advertisement appeared in the Sunday Dispatch:

"In response to numerous applications, the Jersey and Guernsey Airways, Ltd., has opened a waiting list for those desiring to return to the Channel islands by air as soon as the islands are free of enemy occupation."

Only the Air Escapes From This New Cell

GOLDENDALE, WASH. — The Goldendale jail's 83-year-old record for being one of the easiest in the country to get out of is doomed.

The new jail has hollow steel bars with a compressed air whistle attached. Whenever the bars are tampered with, air escapes and the whistle blows.

Agriculture and Labor

"Agriculture has excellent reasons to take concern for the welfare of labor," says Wheeler McMillen. "The situation after the war is over will be of particular importance to farmers. Men earning good wages full time are much better customers than men without jobs. Men steadily employed under satisfactory conditions are far less likely than men without work to become the prey of men who agitate for strange kinds of government. Agriculture ought not, therefore, to develop hostility toward labor and toward labor organizations as such. A wiser course would be to try to use agriculture's influence for correction of those abuses which do no good either to laborers, farmers or the nation."

America's Real Stimulant

"In the United States, every man's value is determined by his activity, and every man is given the opportunity to develop his abilities. An American's real stimulant and pride consist in being a self-made man, in fighting, and in winning the fight." —Javier Prado.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Military motorcycles, for couriers, for speeding light guns from one section to another, are an important part of America's mechanized army. Many are equipped with sidecars for use of staff officers. They cost from $400 to $450.

We need thousands of these small maneuverable machines in our Army today. You and your neighbors, all buying War Bonds and Stamps, can help buy them for the Army. Invest at least ten percent of your income every payday in War Bonds and Stamps and become a member of the patriotic "Ten Percent Club." It is rapidly becoming the largest club in the world.

On October 15th the operating speed of Greyhound buses was immediately adjusted to conform with the new wartime regulations of the Office of Defense Transportation. Since then buses have been running on the old schedules but at the new speed. Beginning on December 1st, however, a completely new schedule of arrival and departure times will go into effect.

As can readily be understood, it has taken a considerable period of time to complete the full rearrangement of a service that has transported more than 85 million wartime travelers since Pearl Harbor. Until the final changeover to new schedules, until every detail of the new service is worked out, there may still be occasions when you will be inconvenienced.

For instance, you may find that connections are not as well-timed as in the past—it may be difficult to get complete information about some trips—telephones at the Greyhound terminal may be congested — new time tables may not be available. You may be sure, however, that Greyhound is doing everything possible to maintain its high standards of service under unusual conditions.

Yet on the whole, you may not find the change in operating speed as marked as you might expect. For several months all Greyhound buses have been running at reduced speeds—yet this has not prevented these buses from carrying half again as many passengers as ever before.

Now when every bus, every tire, every gallon of gasoline must be used to full advantage there are ways that you can help. Travel in mid-week when possible — take less baggage than usual — and get tickets and information in advance.

MORE tension, excitement, worry and anger were crowded into the first 24 hours of World War II than were experienced in the other 364 days of America's first year of war.

Within two days of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, Japanese troops began their invasion of the Philippines.

When, on Dec. 16, the United States declared war on Italy and Germany, American marines were battling numerically superior Jap forces on Wake island. The heroic defenders of Wake island, who commanded via radio "Send us more Japs," fell before the enemy eight days later.

Meanwhile the Japanese were spreading their attacks over all the Pacific. Hong Kong surrendered. Then Manila fell. On the same day that Manila fell, 26 United Nations signed a compact to put an end to the dictator nations.

At home rapid steps were being taken to place the nation on an all-out wartime basis.

The President outlined to the nation its program of war, and then named Donald Nelson production boss on January 13.

The heightening crescendo of the nation at war continued. Twenty-one American nations signed a unity pledge at Rio. Five days later, on January 26, the first AEF arrived across the sea in Ulster.

British Singapore surrendered on February 15. One month later U. S. infantry and air forces arrived in Australia. The following day General MacArthur, escaping from the Philippines, arrived there to take command.

Early in April the Japs had overcome almost all resistance in the Netherlands Indies. Bataan fell on the ninth of the month, but Corregidor held on despite continuous artillery and air attacks. Then the Japanese people were given a taste of war. On April 18, Brig. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle led a squadron of bombers over Tokyo and blasted vital spots in that city.

The remainder of the month was rounded out by men 45 to 64 registering on April 27. Sugar rationing, and wartime price control by the OPA went into effect the following day.

The first day of May found American workingmen in factories throughout the country producing more and more for victory. The following day, Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation director, said that train and bus service was to be restricted. News came from the Coral Sea zone that the Japs were whipped in a great sea battle there. In the middle of the month Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby was named head of the WAACs.

The first air attack by the Japs on the American continent came on June third when they bombed Dutch Harbor, Alaska. A few days later 90,770 persons, mostly Japs, were removed inland from the West coast. Then on June 12 Japanese forces landed in the Aleutians, on Kiska and Attu islands. News was breaking fast now. Elmer Davis was appointed head of the Office of War Information. Soon the navy announced (June 22) that it was convoying ships along the East coast. On June 26 one of the greatest news stories of the year broke when the FBI announced they had nabbed eight Nazi saboteurs who had been landed on Long Island and Florida beaches.

A seven man military commission was appointed July 2 by President Roosevelt to try the saboteurs.

The first days of August found Australian and American troops pushing the Japs back in New Guinea. On August 8 began the United States' Solomon islands offensive as the navy attacked the enemy fleet and shore positions. The marines landed on the 10th and established strong shore positions. Soon they were fighting on Tulagi, Florida, and Guadalcanal islands. Air, land and sea forces joined to beat off attacks by the Japs. Heavy naval losses were recorded by both sides. Meanwhile in the U. S. six of the Nazi saboteurs were found guilty and executed; two were imprisoned.

On September 2, announcement was made that U. S. troops were in Belgian Congo, and that U. S. planes were bombing the Japs in China. American bombers made another foray against the Japs on the Aleutians. A Jap sponsored disobedience movement in Chicago was nipped by the FBI when it arrested 84 Negroes and one white man. Wendell L. Willkie, on his round-the-world tour of the United Nations, visited the Russian battlefront and returned to Moscow toward the last of the month.

Action in the Alaskan zone came to a close to Jap-held Kiska. The Japs, consolidating their scattered forces in Alaska, quit Attu and Agattu on October 7. In an interview Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson announced that by the end of 1943 the army will be more than seven million soldiers. In Europe, U. S. flying Fortresses bomb Nazi sub base at Lorient and ripped it apart. A few days later it was announced that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker was missing with his plane crew as it was on a flight to an unnamed destination in the Southwest Pacific. At the end of October neared, the see-saw struggle between the Nazis and Allies flared up after comparative quiet. Thousands of Allies, many of them U. S. tank-men and aviators, joined with British forces and began the push against Rommel. Lieut. Gen. Montgomery said he was out to clear Africa of the Nazis.

The first day of November found added names on many luxuries in compliance with recent passed tax bill intended to add billions to the treasury. Meanwhile in New Guinea, the Solomons, and over the European continent, the Yanks continued to dish it out.

On Saturday, November 7, word flashed through that the American Expeditionary Forces were moving against Vichy, France, in North Africa. Vichy broke diplomatic relations. The fall of Algiers marked the greatest initial American success in establishing the long-heralded second front. Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in command in North Africa reported himself "well satisfied" with opening developments. Gen. Henri Giraud, French general who escaped from German prison camps both in this war and the last one, arrived in Algeria to organize a French North African army and "again take up arms side by side with forces of the United Nations for the defeat of Germany and Italy."

The closing days of America's first year of World War II were marked by intense interest in the news of developments on the recently opened African second front and reports from the far-flung battle lines of the Pacific.
